RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE ABOVE WORK. "We have had frequent occasion to speak of the diligence, good sense, and good intentions, of Mr. Murray; and we congratulate him sincerely on the success of this particular work. We announce this edition, because the alterations and additions are so considerable, that it is rendered almost a new work."

British Crinic, July 1801. "The examples which Mr. Murray has here selected, and the judicious reflections which accompany them, are such as can scarcely fail to make the best impressions, and to produce the best effects, on all who read them with attention. The present edition of this excel lent publication, which has been long known and commended, is enlarged by the addition of twenty-two new characters, filling nearly one hundred pages."

Anti-Jacobin Review, Jan. 1804.

"We have received the tenth and last ediments made in it, will appear from the author's advertisement. We can only add to this account of the present useful volume, our hope that it will be extensively circulated among our countrymen."

The American Review & Literary Journal for July, August & September, 1801.

"On reviewing this book, in its improved form, we find the facts unquestionable and highly interesting-the style correct and neat -and the general tendency of the work such as induces us strongly to recommend it, especially to young readers, who love entertain ment mingled with instruction."

Evangelical Magazine, Oct 1801-"The rapid sale of this small but valuable collection, has anticipated the commendation we are desirous to bestow. In an exemplification of more than seventy remarkable characters, many striking examples are exhibited which, in the quiet hour of reflection, man contribute to arrest the careless and wandering; to animate the sincere and virtuous; and to convince or discountenance those who have been unhappily led to oppose the highest truths." THE WAR IN SPAIN.

We repeat that the possession of Madrid, by the hostile and hitherto triumphant army of Bonaparte, is not the conquest of Spain, nor even of the provinces of Old and New Castile. The latest bulletins are not replete with information of interesting nature to the amateurs of military science. Indeed that description of state papers, aside from their ridiculous exaggerations, always abound with petty and almost childish details. Evidently they are not the productions of a military mind. Perhaps it is not improbable, that, when the splendor of success shall have ceased to dazzle the eyes of those who behold the great events of the present time, and the powers of cool examination shall be called into exercise, the pretensions of Napoleon the Great to the character of the first scientific General of the Age, will be thought rather questionable. As General Bennigsen is said to have remarked, there is no variety, there is a perfect sameness in his operations. With him the chef d'œuvre of the military art is to vutflank his enemy, which is little more than to overpower him by numbers. We speak of his recent campaigns only. His first operations in Italy were certainly wonderful. There he was opposed by far superior numhers, and whatever Fortune may have done for him his own talents must have powerfully contributed to his unexpected and unprecedented triumphs. It would be foolish to deny that he is a man of elevated genius. It would be no less absurd to say that he does not possess acquired abilities of uncommon eminence, as well military as political. Still we may be permitted to doubt whether he is possessed of the profound and perfect military science of a Hannibal, a Marlborough, a Frederick, or even a Mo-

At Austerlitz and Jena, Napoleon could have found no difficulty in carrying into execution his favorite system of outflanking and getting upon the rear of the enemy .-In both those battles his numbers were decideally superior, and he was not opposed by commanders of any considerable military skill. The battle of Austerhtz was called the battle of the Three Emperors, but two of the three were mere cyphers. The Austrian and Russian armies were dispirited and almost defeated before the contest commenced. At Jena he had no opponent, a victory over whom could add a new tinge of verdure to his laurels. The Duke of brunswick was worn out with age, the King of Prussia was profoundly ignorant of the art of war, & the young Princes of Prussia were mere Hotspurs and mad Anthonies.* In both those battles, all was ignorance indecision, presumption, on the one side ;all was knowledge, energy, calculation, on the other. Events could not have been different from what they were but by the aid of miracle. They might, indeed, have been in some measure, different, had the Emperor of the Gauls been opposed by the Arch Duke Charles and Bennigsen, instead of Emperors, Kings, Dukes, who scarcely knew the right of an army from its left, or its van from the rear.

These remarks are not intended to detract, in an illiberal manner, from the military merit of the Emperor Napoleon .-That merit is confessedly and most indisputably great. We may say of bim, as Cicero said of Pompey, " So many and different wars, against such a variety of foes, not only carried on, but completely terminated by this one man, sufficiently proclaim, that there is no part of military knowledge in which he is not an accomplished master. Industry in business, intrepidity in danger, vigor in action, promptness in execution, prudence in council, all these qualities appear in greater lustre in him, than in almost all other generals."-As in the case of Pompey, so in that of Bonaparte, Italy is a witness (testis est Itaha) and an immortal witness too, to his talents and his glory. France is a witness

At Tudela is on the right of the Ebro, the Tudela, the French, by a vigorous charge at the point of the bayonet, penetrated one of the weak points in the Spanish line, in consequence of which a powerful force of cavalry rushed through the opening, fell upon the rear of the Spaniards, and threw all army was " absolutely bad," not less in reinto consusion. Cas tanos says that he repulsed the enemy upon the left, and while he was pursuing them, a division of the enemy penetrated through Tudela on the right, and took his pursuing troops in the rear. Why did he not content himself with repelling the enemy to his "olive grove on the left, whence he had descended with a tremendous fire," and instead of weakening his line by a partial pursuit, which is always a dangerous operation, why did he not strengthen and guard his right, and preserve, by restraining his left to the proper point, the line unbroken, so as to prevent the enemy from getting upon his rear, and in the most fatal manner too, thro' the centre of his whole army; for it is hardly to be supposed that the column of the enemy which is said to have penetrated the right, marched at its leisure along the rear of the centre, to attack the Spanish left which was in the pursuit of the heroes of the "olive grove"? Upon the whole, this must have been one of the strangest of all military operations. So far as we are able to judge, there must have been very great mismanagement on the Spanish side. It would | French statement is a very natural as a very appear from Fairburn's map that there are clear one. The battle was fought near of Castanos was placed, which was soon dethe Ebro, for we are told that 4000 were feated also. This again is consistent with killed or driven into that river. It appears the assertion that Castanos commanded in by the English account that Tudela was the person on the left, for Cascante was on the right and the advanced part of the position, left of the line, and at the very extreme and that the place is commanded by heights and is indefensible. Since writing the above, we have turned to the eleventh bulletin, of which we had but an indistinct recollection, and find that our idea that it must have been the centre of Castanos' line attack the right flank of the enemy (the Spawhich was pierced by the French, was a nish left being opposed to the French right) correct one. No disposition could be worse than this, and, if this were indeed the case, the French might well say that the disposition of the Spanish being commanded by the heights of Tudela, "and its left occupying a line of a league and a half." Every one knows that in the case of two armies fronting each other, the right of the one is opposite to the left of the other, and vice versa, like a man and his shadow in the mirror. The bulletin says that gen. Castanos commanded in person on the left, which appears to have been comparatively a strong and secure position, when it is evident that he ought to have been particularly attentive to his right, which was the most exposed& the least defensible. The bulletin is perfectly intelligible, but the Spanish account is not so. The former states that on the centre being penetrated. the cavalry passed the opening, and wheeling to the left, enveloped the Spanish right. But the Spanish account states that their left was at first successful, but upon the right (not the centre) being pierced, the French fell upon the rear of the pursuers (the Spanish left.) To do this they must have marched several miles, and, as we have al ready observed, passed the whole Spanish centre. This is almost inconceivable. The grange attacked the village of Cascante (or Calcante as it is in the map) where the line point of it, at a great distance from Tudela. Castanos says nothing of being himself at Cascante, which he says was two hours march from the field of battle, but only that gen. NON-INTERCOURSE LAW. We publish the supplemental circular the secretary of the treasury, revoking the most chooxious part of the construction had placed upon the non-intercourse law The opinion is adhered to, that foreign vessels cannot carry away a purchased cago; but it is now admitted, that they my clear for interdicted ports, without ginns any security ; still, if they clear for a pre which is not interdicted, they must give security not to go to one that is. This is a proof, that either the law, or the construction placed upon it, is very absurd and preposterous. The consequence must be, that all foreign vessels will clear for interdicted ports, and go where they please afterwards It is not therefore of any moment, since the distinction affects nothing but the form of clearing. This amelioration is however a great point gained for the justice of our ountry, in respect to foreign nations. Knowing of no other means of construing the embargo laws, than by their clear & unambiguous letter and spirit; we cannot perceive how foreign vessels giving fourfold security can be debarred by the principles of the act from carrying away cargoes acquired here, whether of domestic produce or of foreign merchandize. The prohibi tion, as explained by the treasury, extend what was intended as a general interdiction of intercourse with two powers only, to a partial cessation of a customary trade with all others, viz. in their own vessels. In interpretation can be maintained only three the absurdity, of confining the cases it which foreign vessels are, as abovemention ed, to give the fourfold security on their clearing for ports not prohibited, leaving them free to sail to an interdicted port with out giving any. The truth is, this fourtood security is intended to prevent cargoes 0) tained here from being carried to interdisted ports, and ought not to be applied to any other circumstances. The misconstruction, as we conceive it to be, being persisted in is the more to be regretted; as it may, and probably will, induce foreign governments to cripple our trade by a mutual prohibition to carry return cargoes.

We hope, that this part of the subject will undergo another revision, and that the only rational and just construction it admits, will be substituted by an effort of the same cardor, which discarded the former mistake.

The next part of the circular correctly observes, that neither the granting nor refus ing of a clearance to American vessels can oust the courts of justice from fixing the true application of the law to the condition of a port to which a voyage may be made, in conformity or contrary to a clearance granted. This is a very proper deference to judicial supremacy, which, should it be more uniformly cherished than it was under the last administration, will add not alittle to the credit of the present. But are we to understand the secretary to mean, that after a voyage is sanctioned by granting a clearance, he will order a prosecution of an individual, whose mistake was common to the officers of the customs?

The reasons given for considering St. Domingo as a part of France, is very insufficient; viz. that it has not been acknows ledged by any act of government. Independence is matter of fact, and may be complete without any formal acknowledge ment. If a country be independent, it can not be a colony of another, and we and all Calatayud, or Calatajud, to which place the world are bound to treat it as such Castanos retreated, is in Arragon, between | Such were the principles maintained 10; BY THE BALTIM

Latest from Spain.

The Editor of the Federal Gazette has received from his New York correspondents, very late news from Spain, by the armalat N. York of the British brig George

Our correspondents enclose an extract of aletter from Havanna, and the Havanna Agroraextra of the eighth of March; their contents are below. It appears from these accounts, to the 2d or 3d Feb :

That Bonaparte, by intrigue and by hard felting has gained considerable advantages

That the Patriot army under Palafox, has ained, perhaps equal advantages in a blooand hard fought battle at Saragossa, where the French Division under Marshal Moncey was completely routed.

The Spaniards are sorely oppressed, and many thousands have been murdered since the trant has invaded their country: the Buish auxiliaries have also suffered. But the blood-hounds of Gaul have paid full amount for their partial and occasional trimphs. Eighty-four thousand French misoners at Cadiz! what strange bulletin accounts Bonaparte has given us! Can the most credulous believe the French account in its full extent?

SEVILLE, Jan. 27. On the 30th December, died in this city, and 81 years and 2 months, his excellency Joseph Monnino, count of Florida Blan-President of the Supreme Junta of the

FROM SARAGOSSA.—On the 21st, in morning, the columns of the enemy apared on the heights which command ant Torrero and the battery of Bonavisat the same time two strong corps of inand cavalry advanced to the attack the defiles on our left; whilst on nght they attacked with impetuosity the a Blanca and carried is The battery of arista, thus become flanked and a grade of the enemy setting fire to a magaof powder it blew up; upon which the likery retired to take another position and the to the bridge of America, this acent compelled our troops to retire withthe redoubt of the Pelar situated at the of the bridge de la Sherba, which effected in good order. About midseven columns of the enemy's infanwith a proportion of cavalry and a ag train of artillery shewed themscoming round the Arabel, on the opthe side of the river. Our capt. general the brigadier, captain of the royal ds to take possession of this point, which tain the hottest fire of the enemy for five hours. Don Manuel Velasco, colonel of artillery, pointed his guns so well and kept up so well directed a fire from the three batteries attacked by the French, that such was the havoc thus made, that this division of the enemy retreated in the greatest disorder; a corps of reserve then coming up, renewed the attack with great impetuosity, in which a partial but temporary advantage was gained over a portion of our troops.-Our general, accompanied by lieut. general Don Juan O'Neilly and field marshal Don Philip Santmarc, placed himself at the head of our broken line, and, sword in hand, rallied his troops, led them again to the attack; when, encouraged by the presence and undaunted valor of their chief, our troops rushed forward with an irresistible ardor, and gained a complete victory; in which the French were completely dispersed, leaving on the field and under the walls more than 4000 dead, and as many more taken prisoners, among whom were the grenadiers who fought so desperately. The held of battle afforded our troops immense booty, besides the most honorable triumph of war, the humiliation of those who came from the north.

This triumph, so honorable to this valiant city, has rendered it impregnable. It can only be taken when it wants arms to defend it; every house is a castle; each heart a strong fortress, and each battery a testimony of art, of talents and of valor.

Here follows a list of the officers and corps who particularly distinguised themselves.

Some skirmishing continued several days after the battle above, in the course of which many were killed and taken on both sides.

By latest accounts from Saragossa it appears that while the enemy has not altogether relinquished his designs on that brave city, the besieged feel confident of ultimate success, as all classes are inspired with unconquerable courage, relying on the protection of God, and the justice of their cause.

On the 22d December, the day after the unsuccessful attack, Marshal Moncey addressed the following letter to the Captain-General and Magistrates of Saragossa.

" SIRS, " The city of Saragossa is now completeinvested, and all communication with the country cut off. I can now employ a gainst it all the means which are sanctioned by the laws of war. The 5th division of the grand army, under marshal Mortier, and the troops under my own command, are ready to renew the attack. The city of Madrid has capitulated, and thus preserved itself from the misfortunes which must have resulted from longer resistance. Should not Saragossa imitate the example of the capital, its total destruction is inevitable.

Marshal Mortier and myself indulge the hope that you will prevent the effusion of blood and the destruction of this beautiful city; so respectable for its population, its commerce and its wealth, by an immediate surrender; and thus entitle yourselves to the veneration and benedictions of its inhabitants.

Be assured, gentlemen, that every thing will be done, compatible with my honor and duty to the emperor, to ensure to you, and to the inhabitants the undisturbed enjoyment of peace and tranquility.

I propose to you by this flag of truce the appointment of commissioners to meet those whom I may authorise, to treat for the accomplishment of this desirable purpose.

With great consideration, &c. MARSHAL MONCEY.

Head Quarters, Torrere, Dec. 22, 1808.

ANSWER.

The general in chief of the army of reserve answers from Saragossa. This city cannot think of surrendering. Marshall M. may therefore observe the laws of war, and measure his strength with mine. I have open an uninterrupted communication with all parts of Spain, and have abundance of every thing. Sixty thousand brave men, whom I am proud of the honor to command who pant for battle, seeking no reward but honor and the deliverance of their country, forbid the listening to your proposal.

M. Moncey will immortalize himself if, by a strict observance of the laws of war, he can obtain a victory which no one here will suppose. My glory will not be less in having preserved this city, by the valour of our soldiers, opposed to a system of despicable oppression, unknown to the ancient marshals of France. Having sustained a siege of 61 days, the commander who fears not death nor privations, will not now, when his army by reinforcements equals in numbers their besiegers, shrink from the glorious task imposed upon them.

well managed that he was able to sus- teously shed is as glorious to the cause of March 28.

Spain as it is evincive of the ignomy and cruelty of those who would enslave them.

Marshall M. is assured that for 11,000,000 of people to be free it is sufficient to will it. Their enthusiasm and loyalty cannot be subdued. I would not willingly sacrifice the brave men whom I command; but there is not one of them who would not joyfully shed his blood in defence of the last inch of his beloved country.

Yesterday must have convinced your excellency that I might with equal propriety offer terms to your army, who will all perish under the walls of Saragossa, ere it surrenders.

The commander in chief cannot credit the account of the surrender of Madrid, unless indeed he were informed of the treachery which alone could have proved the destruction of the brave, united and loval inhabitants of that Capital.

With respect I am, Your Excellency's, &c. EL GENERAL PALAFOX. Head Quarters, Saragossa, 22d Dec. 1808.

TUESDAY, MARCH 28.

NEWS FROM SPAIN.

Our readers will remember that previous to the sailing of the Fortuna, from Havanna, a dispatch vessel had just arrived there from Cadiz, which she left about the 1st February.

We learn that a later arrival from Havanna brings official advices to the Spanish consul at New York, received by the above vessel from Cadiz. They state that general Moncey had made an attack upon general Palatox at Saragossa, when a very sanguinary conflict ensued, which terminated in favor of the Spaniards; the French losing 8000 killed and wounded, and a great number of prisoners. The battle was fought on the 23d December.

The above particulars were written from New York on Thursday last, just as the mail was closing.

Criticism by Judge Brackenridge, dated CARLISLE, Jan. 19th, 1809.

Dear Sir,

I have read and read again your pub lication, the life of Washington; and you will not understand me as acknowledging it to be without defects, when I take notice only of its excellencies. These indeed are very great You have combined, with great felicity, the useful and the pleasant: historical information and amusing anecdote. You have drawn from both urns, of tears and mirth. With a sudden transition we have the pathetic and the comic, and both irresistable. Your style is always perspicuous, and occasionally noble; in flights of imagery and richness of expression, rising to the sublime. But the great richness of your book is, the morality of the sentiment. I do not know a better to be put into the hands of young persons to raise the mind to political and moral virtue. It ought to be introduced into all schools; and to be in every family. With regard to biographical merit, the delineation is such as to give a view of character, not on a parade day, but as independent of command or station. This is the painting which interests. It is that alone which makes a likeness; for a mere outline, wanting the expression, gives no physiogno-
